

Working with InformAll

Individuals and organisations are deluged with information. Getting the most out of it, finding, interpreting and using it requires skills, know-how and judgement. The ability to navigate effectively and confidently through the information maze is known as information literacy. InformAll exists to develop understanding of the importance and relevance of information literacy. We raise awareness of its benefits for individuals, organisations and communities. InformAll brings together experts with distinctive perspectives and we work collaboratively with our partners and clients to offer practical research-based guidance and support.

InformAll is an independent consultancy that can help you to:

- Develop your understanding of information competencies and skills in your organisation or sector
- Identify funding opportunities and formulate joint proposals
- Manage multi-player projects to take advantage of different outlooks
- Connect with key stakeholders
- Build communities of interest through a creative mix of different professions

What we offer

Research

Identifying case studies and good practice
Exploring what information literacy means in your educational, professional or social context
Investigating related literacies, such as digital capabilities

Influence

Preparing presentations, consultation responses
Making contacts with policy-makers and other key players
Promoting outputs and outcomes from InformAll-enabled activities

Policy

Providing advice for policy-makers
Showing the value of information literacy in your sector or environment
Providing practical support for information literacy-related policies and practices

Tools

Developing and designing toolkits and frameworks

Events

Organising workshops, conferences and webinars
Arranging relevant training

InformAll aims to provide a representative view on the challenges of developing information literacy in different contexts. We bring together different constituencies and professional groups with distinctive perspectives on the advance of information know-how. We help communities to develop their interest, policies or activities in information-related knowledge, understanding and skills.

Whether you are looking for insights on your organisation or sector, or looking for project partnerships, or just want to find out more, please contact Stéphane Goldstein at sg@informall.org.uk or go to informall.org.uk.